Dear Friends,

As we reflect on the past year, there is much to be grateful for, but we are especially indebted to you. Your commitment to the Observatory has given us the tools to ensure thousands more people can access the unique resources we offer and gain better understanding of the weather on New England's highest peak. Your support allows us to offer cutting-edge science, provide much needed research, and connect our expertise to classrooms throughout the world.

With your help, our educational programs have opened the doors of our weather station to young students throughout New England. You can read more about all we do on education in the pages of this report, but here are a few highlights:

- Field trips by young students to our mountaintop station represent the culmination of learning that begins during our school day, afterschool, virtual, and summer programs.
- Our teacher professional development offerings give educators the tools needed to instruct on weather and climate science not just in winter (Arctic Wednesdays) but now also in summer (Peak Perspectives).
- We've returned to a full slate of one-of-a-kind winter programs, with EduTrip participants making unique overnight memories while learning about the weather and changing climate of the White Mountains among other topics.
- This summer, we'll open our research station to public tours for visitors who may be on the mountain for the very first time.

You've also made it possible for us to bring researchers of all ages back atop the mountain. Read more in this report after you enjoy a few highlights:

- Our Workforce Training and Diversity internship programs have grown in size and support, with more opportunities for students to learn operational meteorology and undertake unique research.
- We welcomed new corporate partners, universities, and government agencies to test products and partner with us by establishing clear rates for our services. Incredibly, even the United States Air Force will soon return to make Mount Washington a major long-term site for tests of their weather instrumentation.
- We've garnered incredible grant support from the Northern Border Regional Commission, United States Congress, and Environmental Protection Agency to improve monitoring of weather and snow in the Northeast utilizing our Mount Washington Regional Mesonet.
- In a few short months, we plan to launch a whole suite of programs aimed at providing undergraduate students with hands-on learning experiences.

For the recreational community, your support means we can continue our legacy of daily weather observations and forecasts on Mount Washington that keep people safe. A few highlights of what follows in this report:

- We've partnered with United States Forest Service, New Hampshire Homeland Security, Eversource, and others to broaden our message and strengthen the work of the safety community.
- We have made big plans to provide our forecasts where they are needed most with the help of partners in the media and new streamable products of our own.
- We completed our first joint internship with the United States Forest Service's Mount Washington Avalanche Center and have plans to initiate one with the Appalachian Mountain Club and Hubbard Brook Ecosystem Study to strengthen ties with these organizations that help recreationists stay safe and aware of their impact on the natural world.

We're humbled by what we have been able to accomplish together. Our work simply can't be achieved without you and the hard work of our partners at the Mount Washington Cog Railway Company, Mt. Washington Auto Road, New Hampshire State Parks, and others. We thank them, and you, for all that we have been able to accomplish this year. And we look ahead with anticipation to all we have planned for the coming year.

Sincerely,

Drew Bush, Ph.D.

More access equals more weather and climate learning across all ages

New Hampshire Teacher of the Year Christian Cheetham (lower left in red jacket) toured our summit weather station in September 2023 with his Alvirne High School students, a trip made possible by the Mount Washington Valley Chamber of Commerce, Mount Washington Cog Railway, and the New Hampshire Department of Education.

Last year, a total of 123 weather station tours welcomed over 474 members and other visitors, who learned how we create forecasts and maintain instruments in Mount Washington's legendary extremes.

Twenty-two area middle schools received visits during spring 2023 from our education staff, who gave away 800 backpacks full of learning resources while launching our expanded suite of K-12 programming.

Over 1,200 students from across the U.S. and Canada joined virtual education programs with our staff, who more than doubled the amount of programs over the prior year, for a total of 35.

School-day programs totaled 139, benefiting more than 1,500 K-12 students largely in northern New Hampshire, western Maine, and Vermont, far exceeding last year's goal of 84 programs.

Thirty-six after-school programs provided highly desired enrichment experiences for over 280 youth in our region.

Six pairs of K-12 teachers participated in winter shift change on Mount Washington during Arctic Wednesdays. A record 90 teachers applied for the professional development program, now in its seventh year. We are launching a new Peak Perspectives summer program to bring more teachers to our weather station.

More than 450 students visited our summit weather station through our new field trips program last year, with transportation provided by the Mount Washington Cog Railway and Mt. Washington Auto Road. Field trips continue with a full spring calendar for area schools even as our education staff launches Peak Perspectives, a new summer professional development program, and Storm Scouts, a new summer camp for 5th-8th graders. Our field trips are made possible by you, the New Hampshire Charitable Foundation's Neil and Louise Tillotson Fund, and a bequest from the Sheldon Family Estate. Generous program support is also provided by the Ham Charitable Foundation and The Dorr Foundation.

Students use handheld instruments to measure and record weather data during a field trip to our summit weather station.

> "Constructing is learning, and students are constructing and creating their own understanding in the classroom in the ways the staff and scientists on Mount Washington are. It's so exciting!"
> — Holly Munce, third grade teacher at Berlin Elementary School

More than 1,500 viewers attended our monthly Science in the Mountains virtual program. Highlights included talks by Dr. Ralph Keeling and storm chaser Reed Timmer. The program saw 3,700 YouTube views.

• • • • • • • •

Twelve virtual education programs and two school-day programs taught K-12 students how to use weather and climate data to view the April 8 Total Solar Eclipse, with a total of 918 students attending these sessions.

• • • • • • • •

Fifty-six guests spent an overnight like no other during EduTrips, a program roughly 30 years old, learning last winter from MWOBS staff and experts like meteorologist Eric Fisher and past trustee and educator Marsha Rich.

Climbing trips returned for the first year since the pandemic, bringing 24 climbers and guides to the summit for an overnight training experience with Eastern Mountain Sports, International Mountain Climbing School, Synnott Mountain Guides, and Redline Guiding.

• • • • • • • •

We supported community events including the NH Association of School Principals' annual meeting, Mount Washington Valley School to Career Partnership Camps, and Mount Washington Valley STEM Expo, while also training Appalachian Mountain Club backcountry staff.

• • • • • • • •

Another high-visitation year at our Extreme Mount Washington summit museum will include a project with Worcester Polytechnic Institute students to assess and improve visitor experiences.

We participated in the American Alliance of Museums' Museum Assessment Program to review collections stewardship, and we designed a plan to improve care of our library, archive, and museum collections

• • • • • • • •

MWOBS helped launch a White Mountains Connected Learning Ecosystem, bringing together classroom teachers, museum and informal science educators, librarians, and 4-H teachers to develop youth resources for climate science and data literacy.

New technology and partnerships expand our data and research

A lenticular cloud over the summit in January.

Northern Border Regional Commission grant funding will allow us to upgrade 11 Mount Washington Regional Mesonet stations and add 18 new stations, for a total of 36, expanding atmospheric parameters to include pressure, wind, and precipitation.

Our fully funded mesonet expansion to the western and northern portions of the White Mountains will improve forecasting, enhance weather data across mountainous terrain, facilitate research with partners, and help our region's businesses plan for economic development.

U.S. Congress' approved budget includes nearly $1.6 million in funds appropriated for MWOBS to purchase ground-based doppler LIDAR, new mesonet stations, a new snow cat, and new summit instrumentation, thanks to support from U.S. Senator Jean Shaheen and U.S. Representative Chris Pappas.

A new joint internship between the Observatory, Appalachian Mountain Club, and Hubbard Brook Ecosystem Study is planned to begin in fall 2024, with work focused on producing an annual climate report utilizing weather and biological data.

Our research team presented a new poster about their research into near-surface lapse rates at the American Meteorological Society's Annual Meeting in Baltimore.

MWOBS received sub-awardee grant funding from the Environmental Protection Agency through the University of Vermont to create a regional hub for mountain weather data.

We provided technical training on weather monitoring and data analysis for regional university students, enhancing their educational experience and preparing them for careers in meteorology and climate science.

YOUR IMPACT: Understanding climate in high terrain

The Observatory hosts a treasure trove of information that plays a pivotal role in understanding the intricacies of climate dynamics in the White Mountains and similar high-terrain regions. It's a vital tool for researchers, policymakers, and anyone interested in the health and future of our planet's mountainous areas. For our research team, maintaining quality data means upgrading and expanding the database to best meet modern standards and ensure data integrity.

Jay Broccolo, Director of Weather Operations, adjusts a wind vane on our instrument tower.

"Long-term and robust meteorological measurements in the Northeast mountains are sparse. Fortunately, the summit of Mount Washington has one of the longest (since 1932) high-quality montane data sets."

—Georgia Murray, Appalachian Mountain Club staff scientist

Winter 2023-24 intern Tricia Hutton studies solid-to-liquid ratios of snow to improve snowfall forecasting and better understand avalanche conditions and societal impacts.

Specialized forecasts at the heart of weather science and safety

Weather Observer & Research Specialist Charlie Peachey de-ices wind sensors and other instruments to ensure continuous collection of weather data in Mount Washington's extreme winter conditions.

Over the course of the year, we reported 8,760 hourly observations, published 1,460 specialized forecasts, and performed all data quality checks (2/day, 1/week, and 1/month).

A new joint internship was introduced to provide training in both weather and avalanche forecasting, with intern work alternating between our weather station and the U.S. Forest Service's Mount Washington Avalanche Center.

Two of our weather observers were promoted to the position of shift leader, responsible for daily weather and summit operations and coordinating with the director of weather operations.

Numerous media outlets visited our summit weather station and produced original stories about our weather forecasting and data for the recreation community, including national coverage on FOX Weather and in The Wall Street Journal.

A new website at mountwashington.org improves access to real-time weather data and forecasts in the White Mountains, in addition to simplifying content updates for our staff.

Our 23rd annual Seek the Peak raised over $195,000 thanks to 291 participants as well as event sponsors and guests. This event connects our highly engaged hiking community of all ability levels with the White Mountains and our work in recreation and safety.

Hundreds of community members attended Observatory events, including our Fall Gathering at Tin Mountain Conservation Center, January dinner in Portland, ME, Total Solar Eclipse presentations and viewing parties, and 90th anniversary Big Wind Day celebrations at our Gladys Brooks Memorial Library open house and celebration at Tuckerman Brewing Company.

This winter marked the launch of a first-of-its-kind internship in partnership with the U.S. Forest Service's Mount Washington Avalanche Center, combining snowpack analysis and meteorological observation, fostering a continuous dialogue between the organizations to support safe decision-making in the White Mountains among hikers, climbers, skiers, and search and rescue teams.

Intern Laura Wilson searches for wind slabs while working for the Mount Washington Avalanche Center (MWAC). Wilson split her time between MWAC and the Observatory's summit weather station.

YOUR IMPACT: Innovative internships for mountain safety

"We enable backcountry users to make more informed decisions based on the conditions they are most likely to encounter in different parts of the forecast area."

— Jeff Fongemie, MWAC director and avalanche forecaster

Backcountry skiers make their way to the summit of Mount Washington, where the Higher Summits Forecast is produced and published twice each day.

MOUNT WASHINGTON OBSERVATORY

MISSION

Mount Washington Observatory is a private, nonprofit, member-supported institution with a mission to advance understanding of the natural systems that create Earth's weather and climate. It serves this mission by maintaining a weather station on the summit of Mount Washington, performing weather and climate research, conducting innovative science education programs, and interpreting the heritage of the Mount Washington region.

PURPOSE

We exist to gather, disseminate, and analyze daily weather data; to contribute to the critical, long-term weather and climate record essential to scientific understanding of weather and climate in a unique, extreme environment.
